POSSSE
scholars
AND THEIR families
2008 ANNUAL REPORT
Since its founding in 1989, The Posse Foundation has partnered with some of this country’s most selective colleges and universities and helped 2,650 students pursue exceptional post-secondary educations. As a result, the hallways and classrooms of these elite gateways to opportunity are increasingly abuzz with a diversity of voices representing the different backgrounds, perspectives and experiences of our great nation.

The Foundation and its partner institutions are not only having a dramatic impact on the lives of Posse Scholars, who take full advantage of the myriad opportunities a first-rate education affords and help to create more inclusive campus communities. Posse and its partners are also leaving their mark on the mothers, fathers, guardians, siblings and other family members who rightfully share in Posse Scholars’ achievements.

For many families, the scholarship represents an unprecedented opportunity to claim a college graduate among them. For others, it marks the continuation of a legacy of extraordinary achievement. For all, it is a moment of immense pride and gratitude.

This year’s annual report features our Scholars and their families, whose sacrifice and hard work are the foundation of these driven young leaders’ success.
Jerry Saunders is busy. Currently a sophomore at Brandeis University double majoring in biology and in health science, society and policy, he is also an officer of the Black Student Organization and a mentor to three freshman pre-med students.

This summer, he will intern at Healthcare for All in Boston as an awardee of the prestigious Eli Siegel Citizenship Fellowship. Jerry plans on becoming a cardiologist.

“I want to save lives,” says Jerry. “Despite how many good doctors there are in the world, too many people don’t have access to them.”

Born and raised in Queens, New York, the youngest of three children, Jerry considers himself privileged to come from a strong family with parents who encouraged them. His brother graduated from Penn State and his sister is studying at Howard University.

“It means a lot that Brandeis has taken an interest in me,” Jerry says. “Being at one of the premiere academic institutions is even more motivation to do well.”

That motivation has led Jerry to make the most of his Posse experience. And with a challenging course load, he is grateful for the support of his peers.

“Last year, during finals, I was studying with two members of my Posse—I was trying to get an A in chemistry,” he says. “We were sitting in a lounge studying and stayed there over night. We each had our own exams to prepare for and we used each other to get there, that’s the whole point of Posse.”

Wherever he goes, Jerry takes with him the lessons he learned at home.

“My father always says that a conviction isn’t a conviction if it can be shaken,” Jerry says. “And my mother taught me that there are boundaries in life and many times you have to accept reality and grow from it.”
The concept of a Posse works for both students and college campuses and is rooted in the belief that a small, diverse group of talented students—a Posse—carefully selected and trained, can serve as a catalyst for increased individual and community development. As the United States becomes an increasingly multicultural society, Posse believes that the leaders of this new century should reflect the country’s rich demographic mix, and that the key to a promising future for our nation rests on the ability of strong leaders from diverse backgrounds to develop consensus solutions to complex social problems. One of the primary aims of the Posse Program is to train these leaders of tomorrow.
Posse started because of one student who said, “I never would have dropped out of college if I had my posse with me.” The Posse Foundation, founded in 1989, identifies public high school students with extraordinary academic and leadership potential who may be overlooked by traditional college selection processes. The Foundation extends to these students the opportunity to pursue personal and academic excellence by placing them in supportive, multicultural teams—Posses—of 10 students. The Foundation’s partner universities and colleges award Posse Scholars four-year, full-tuition leadership scholarships.

mission

goals

1. To expand the pool from which top colleges and universities can recruit outstanding young leaders from diverse backgrounds

2. To help these institutions build more interactive campus environments so that they can become more welcoming institutions for people from all backgrounds

3. To ensure that Posse Scholars persist in their academic studies and graduate so they can take on leadership positions in the workforce president + founder and chair
Twenty years ago, the first Posse packed their bags in New York City and got on a Greyhound bus headed for Nashville, Tennessee. These five students and their mothers spent 26 hours in anticipation. The trip they started that day was really the beginning of an incredible journey for the thousands of young people and their families who would follow—and an incredible journey for Posse.

Today, The Posse Foundation is finding talented young leaders in Atlanta, Boston, Chicago, Los Angeles, New York City and Washington, D.C., and in 2009, will open its seventh site in Miami. Over 2,600 young people have become Posse Scholars. Thirty-five outstanding colleges and universities have become Posse partners. And more than 100 industry-leading companies and organizations have joined Posse to help prepare these young superstars for leadership positions in the workforce.

By the year 2020, we expect to see close to 6,000 Posse alumni in the workforce. They will be doctors, lawyers, teachers, scientists, public officials—the people who will make the decisions that affect our collective lives. This new professional leadership network will be the most diverse this country has seen.

Thanks to the investment of our college and university partners, the commitment of our Career partners and the generosity of our donors, 2008 marked the 20th year for Posse, and with it we broke all records.

Our university partners identified 430 new Scholars across the country and awarded them more than $43 million in leadership scholarships. Bard College, Connecticut College, Kalamazoo College, Tulane University and University of California, Berkeley signed on. And Posse celebrated its first tri-city partner, the University of Wisconsin-Madison.

This year, Posse also created two new programs. With generous support from the Ford Foundation, we launched The Posse Institute—the research arm of the Foundation—to conduct and publish valuable studies on matters of higher education that affect not only our Scholars and the campus communities of our partner institutions, but our entire society. Posse Access—an online database that allows our partner schools to view profiles of students who are not selected for the Posse Scholarship and consider them for regular admission—also debuted this year, tremendously expanding opportunities for the many deserving young people we serve.

We couldn’t be prouder of our Scholars. In the last three years alone, 17 Posse Alumni have won Fulbright Scholarships to study, research and teach abroad. Posse now has close to 1,000 Alumni who are taking on top positions in the workforce, pursuing graduate degrees at leading institutions and exploring professional development opportunities in their communities and around the world—like 2008 Denison University graduate Romero Huffstead, recently elected to Denison University’s board of trustees; or Wheaton Alumnus Derron Wallace, who won the Marshall Scholarship to study at the University of Cambridge; or Vanderbilt Alumna Erica Spatz who served as chief resident at Montefiore Hospital in New York City and is now an internist and fellow in the prestigious Robert Wood Johnson Clinical Scholars Program at Yale University.

The five young people who took a chance and boarded that bus 20 years ago changed their lives and the lives of their families. But at Posse there is always a ripple effect. Posse Scholars have an impact on their families, on the young people who look up to them, on their peers both at home and in college, and then out in the workforce. The concept behind Posse underscores the importance of supporting the individual and the power of the collaborative.

Our Scholars and Alumni’s collective success reflects the transformative impact the program is having and gives cause for optimism about our country’s future.

Warmly,

Deborah Bial, President + Founder

Jeff Ubben, Chair
THE POSSE PROGRAM ACHIEVES ITS GOALS THROUGH FIVE PROGRAM COMPONENTS:
1) RECRUITMENT, 2) PRE-COLLEGIATE TRAINING PROGRAM, 3) CAMPUS PROGRAM, 4) CAREER PROGRAM AND 5) POSSE ACCESS

RECRUITMENT

From September to December each year, Posse conducts the Dynamic Assessment Process (DAP), a unique evaluation method designed to identify young leaders who might be missed by traditional admissions criteria but who can excel at selective colleges and universities. Using nontraditional forums to evaluate potential, DAP offers students an opportunity to demonstrate their intrinsic leadership abilities, their skill at working in a team setting, and their motivation and desire to succeed. DAP has proven to be an extremely effective tool for identifying outstanding young leaders. Through a three-part process, including large group and individual interviews, Posse staff and university partner administrators ultimately select a diverse group of 10 students for each college or university, thus forming a Posse.

PRE-COLLEGIATE TRAINING PROGRAM

From January to August of their senior year in high school, Posse Scholars meet weekly with staff trainers and their Posse peers for two-hour workshops. The Training Program consists of workshops that address four areas: 1) team building and group support, 2) cross-cultural communication, 3) leadership and becoming an active agent of change on campus and 4) academic excellence. The goal of the Training Program is to prepare Scholars for leadership roles on campus and for the high-level academic expectations of their colleges.
CAMPUS PROGRAM

The Campus Program works to ensure the retention of Posse Scholars and to increase the impact of Posse on campus. Posse staff members visit each university four times a year for meetings with Posse Scholars, campus liaisons and mentors. Each mentor meets weekly with the Posse as a team and with individual Scholars every two weeks during the first two years in college. In addition, Posse facilitates an annual weekend-long PossePlus Retreat attended by members of the larger student body, faculty and administration with the goal of discussing an important campus issue identified by Posse Scholars.

CAREER PROGRAM

The Career Program supports Posse Scholars as they transition from being leaders on campus to becoming leaders in the workforce. Posse plays an integral role in the professional development of these young people by providing them with the tools and opportunities necessary to secure highly competitive and career-enhancing internships and jobs. One of the ways Posse achieves this is by partnering with exceptional companies and organizations, both nationally and abroad. The Career Program has three core components: 1) The Internship Program, 2) Career Services and 3) The Alumni Network.

POSSE ACCESS

Posse Access is a new online database designed to give Posse partner colleges and universities exclusive access to unselected student nominees to consider for regular admission. Through Posse Access, the hundreds of finalists nationwide who are not selected can opt to have their application profiles made available to each of Posse’s partner institutions. By identifying candidates through the Posse Access database, partner schools will benefit from Posse’s holistic approach to evaluating student potential and see a much greater pool of highly qualified students.
The Posse Foundation would like to thank its college and university partners. This year, Posse partners awarded over $43 million in leadership scholarships to Posse Scholars across the country.

The Career Program partners listed above reflect partnerships established through June 2009.
NEW INSTITUTIONAL PARTNERS
Posse welcomes five new college and university partners: Bard College, Connecticut College, Kalamazoo College, Tulane University and University of California, Berkeley. Existing partners Trinity College and University of Wisconsin-Madison—Posse’s first tri-city partner—sign on to recruit Scholars from additional sites.

POSSE GALA
The Annual Posse Gala, An Evening of Stars, raises $1.4 million. Emceed by 60 Minutes Correspondent Lesley Stahl, the event honors Posse Chair Emeritus Michael Ainslie, Alumnus Carlos Carela, PricewaterhouseCoopers and University of Wisconsin-Madison Chancellor Emeritus John D. Wiley.

POSSE INSTITUTE
With generous support from the Ford Foundation, The Posse Institute is launched to conduct and publish research on access, leadership, diversity and retention in higher education.

GRAD FELLOWSHIPS
Northwestern University’s Kellogg School of Management and Law School establish graduate fellowships for Posse Alumni. Additionally, University of Washington expands graduate opportunities to Alumni by offering Posse Scholarships in its education, information and social work programs.
SCIENCE POSSE
Ten Scholars from New York City head to Brandeis as members of the first Science Posse—an initiative spearheaded by Brandeis University chemistry professor Irving Epstein with support from the Howard Hughes Medical Institute.

POSSPLUS RETREATS
Nearly 2,000 Scholars, students, faculty and administrators participate in PossPlus Retreats that take place at Poss partner colleges and universities around the country. The retreats cover the topic of social responsibility and feature a special video message from former Vice President Al Gore.

POSS ACCESS
As a component of its new Web site, Poss launches Poss Access, an online database designed to give partner colleges and universities access to the profiles of hundreds of unselected finalists to consider for regular admission.

Angela SkarPeliS
BARD POSSE 1 (ATLANTA) SCHOLAR

Angela SkarPeliS is a self-proclaimed “Grexican.” Her Greek father and Mexican mother both immigrated to the United States as young adults and met in California.

Now settled in Marietta, Georgia, the family’s blended culture is often most apparent in the SkarPeliS kitchen. A collective favorite: quesadillas with feta cheese.

“Neither of my parents went to college,” Angela says. They graduated from high school and worked like dogs and sacrificed for us. The Posse Scholarship is what my parents have worked for their whole lives; to enable my brother and me to go to college and succeed in life.

“My dad used to drum in Greek bands and at festivals. When I was young, he would sit me on his lap and play. People say that that’s why I have rhythm.”

Angela is currently a senior at Lassiter High School. She plays the violin, is co-president and section leader of her school’s accomplished orchestra and sings in the school chorus. She also participates in a Greek dance group at her family’s church. She will enroll at Bard College this fall.

“Visiting Bard was an experience,” Angela says. “It was nothing like I imagined—so huge, with such beautiful buildings. And, the professors seemed genuinely interested in us.

“I remember the experience of finding out I got the scholarship. Right after my final interview for Bard, I had a great feeling but I was nervous. When I received the call, my mom saw the smile on my face and screamed at the top of her lungs. She called my grandmother in Mexico.

“During the Awards ceremony I cried nonstop. I thanked my mother in Spanish and then my dad in Greek. I wanted them to hear it in their own language because I knew it would mean so much more. It was such a moment of extreme happiness.”
"When I got the call for Posse, I was sitting in the room that I share with my 14-year-old brother. He was the first to know and was really excited. He said to me, 'I guess this means that I have to go to college,'” Demarius Walker recalls. “You're darn right,' I said.”

Winning the Posse Scholarship, while an exceptional accomplishment for Demarius, has also had a significant impact on his family. The news set his younger brother on the path to considering higher education, encouraged his older brother to enroll in community college and allowed his mother to share in his achievement.

“When I see that you're going to college, I know that I wasn't a failure,” she said. “You made it, and I feel successful because I helped you get there.”

Currently a senior at Henry Grady High School, Demarius is a gifted member of the debate team. He also has interests in political science and philosophy—potential majors once enrolled at Boston University this fall.

Demarius grew up in Atlanta with four siblings. His mother has worked for many years as a ticket agent and manager for Greyhound. His father, who, growing up he saw only on weekends, is a truck driver. His maternal grandmother has always been the glue that holds everything and everyone together.

“We still joke about my mom's Christmas magic growing up,” Demarius says. “Knowing that we couldn't afford gifts, I would either make a modest Christmas list or no list at all, but she would force me to write down everything I wanted. Magically, she always found a way to get us all of the things on our list. She always turned any bad situation to roses.”
Kindness, courtesy and respect still come very naturally to the George sisters. Throughout their childhood, they recall their father teaching these values, frequently encouraging them to repeat those three words. Erin, the oldest and Anna, second, are Posse Alumnae, having graduated from Bryn Mawr College in 2006 and Hamilton College in 2008, respectively.

“My concept of family changed when I became a part of Posse,” says Anna. “Our grandmother died three weeks before I started college. I was so upset and had no desire to leave my family and my sisters. It was a difficult time in my life but my Posse immediately became my extended family. They really embraced me.”

The George sisters grew up in Boston in a tight-knit, Irish-American family of sports enthusiasts known for lots of laughter. Having been exposed to the hospital where their mother has worked a second job as a secretary for more than 20 years, Erin developed an interest in a career in medicine—and, coincidentally, her initials are E.K.G.

Both Erin and Anna are currently pursuing graduate degrees—Anna at Simmons College for a master’s in teaching and Erin at Massachusetts General Hospital Institute of Health Professions to become a nurse and midwife. They credit a strong family support system and Posse for much of their success.

“To get a full-tuition scholarship to a private school was winning the lottery,” says Erin. “My mom, dad and grandparents all cried. Posse was a huge opening of a door to a world that was unimaginable to our family.”
Kency, Loubens and Melano Theork are brothers, and, remarkably, they are all Posse Scholars—a first in Posse history. They each graduated at the top of their class in high school, founded and led campus organizations, graduated with honors and are today gainfully employed in the financial sector.

The Theork brothers and their two sisters moved to the United States in 1997, leaving behind their life in Haiti. They, together with their mother, joined their father who had moved to Boston 13 years earlier in search of better opportunities for his family.

“Life here was different,” says Loubens, who graduated from Hamilton College in 2005 and currently works as an investment analyst. “When we moved here, our dad was living in a one-bedroom apartment, which we all shared—all seven of us.”

The Theorks, however, adapted quickly to their new surroundings. Today, they remain grateful for the opportunities Posse’s partner institutions provided.

“I had the desire to go to college, but I had no idea how I was going to get there,” says Kency, a graduate of Bowdoin who today is a senior financial analyst for a major investment firm. So, when I won the award, it was definitely a big relief—not only for me but for my family.”

For the Theork brothers, achieving financial success provides an opportunity to help uplift fellow Haitians living below the poverty line.

“My dad was able to support us by sending whatever little money he had back home to my mom in Haiti,” says Melano, a graduate of the first Hamilton Posse. “And our mom would also share what little she had with others. This instilled in us that no matter what you have, always try to share it with someone less fortunate.”

To that end, every year the Theork brothers fund the education of 25 low-income students in Haiti through a program they started in 2000.
“My mom could have stayed in the Philippines and had a relatively decent, OK life,” says Maureen Barradas, who is currently a senior majoring in English at Carleton College. “But for her and especially for her family, ‘OK’ was never enough.”

Apparently “OK” is not enough for Maureen either. In addition to her regular appearance on the dean’s list, she is a recipient of the Mellon Mays Fellowship, a prestigious and highly competitive program that prepares undergraduates for doctoral study. She is also leaving her mark on Carleton’s campus community through her involvement with the Office of Intercultural Life and the Asian Club, which she co-chairs.

Maureen is especially grateful for the personal attention she has received from her professors at Carleton College. “The relationship I’ve formed with some of the faculty here has been huge for me,” she says. “Knowing that I could get their perspective on things and have their support when I need it has been so helpful.”

Maureen’s mother’s desire to make sure that her family received the best education possible drove her to immigrate to the United States in 1992, eventually settling in Chicago. She worked two jobs and 16-hour days to provide for her children and the rest of her family—a sacrifice that continues to fuel Maureen’s exceptional drive to succeed.

“To see how much my mom’s sacrifice has paid off has really inspired me to give back,” says Maureen. “And not just by getting degrees and winning awards, but by encouraging my nieces and nephews to go to college, too. It’s my goal to impart the value of education to the next generation.”
Five years ago, Romero Huffstead was awarded the Posse Scholarship to attend Denison University. Today, a celebrated Alumnus and the recipient of numerous awards from Denison, including the presidential medal—the highest honor a student can receive—he is a newly elected member of Denison’s board of trustees.

“At first, when you think of the magnitude of this scholarship, you don’t think it’s within your grasp,” Romero says. “Denison invested in me and helped me to grow as a person and Scholar, and I want to give back through my leadership. So much of what I’ve accomplished is because of Posse and Denison.”

Romero grew up in the once gang-infested Rogers Park neighborhood of Chicago in a multiethnic household with influences of Jamaican, Cuban and German cultures. Though he is the middle of four children, Romero’s older sisters always refer to him as their big brother—“the strong, focused, motivated one who inspires the rest of us,” they say. As a result of their own financial struggles, Romero’s parents always encouraged him and his siblings to take their education seriously as a way to empower themselves and change their circumstances.

“I want to influence people to know that it doesn’t matter where you grow up or what you’ve been through, you can be successful and do the things you want to do in life,” he says.

Currently pursuing a career as a psychologist, Romero is a graduate student in clinical mental health counseling at Indiana State University. “When I was younger, I promised my mom that I would be successful,” he says. “Being awarded the Posse Scholarship was a step that brought me closer to that promise.”
Regina Chagolla may be the last of seven children, but she is the first among them to graduate from high school, the first to attain a college degree, and will be the first to receive her master’s degree, which she is currently pursuing at the University of California, Berkeley.

An American-born citizen with roots in Mexico, Regina credits her mother’s ingenuity and hard work, as well as her siblings, for her many successes.

“My mom—who only has a sixth-grade education but worked so hard to make sure that I could go to a good high school—is my inspiration,” Regina says. “When I got the Scholarship, she was so proud, she cried.”

When Regina was 13, one of her sisters introduced her to Los Angeles Conservation Corps (LACC)—an urban environmental conservation and beautification organization. Four years later, they nominated Regina for the Poise Scholarship.

“I didn’t have a safe neighborhood to play in,” Regina says. “But thanks to my sister connecting me to this organization, I was able to travel to other parts of the city and learn about its many hidden resources; it was kind of like my classroom outside of the classroom.”

Today, Regina has focused her studies on developing effective secondary education curricula and teaching methods, so that promising urban students stand a better chance of graduating and going on to college.

“I have 23 nieces and nephews,” she says. “I send them pictures of my travels, I tutor them. I laugh when I think of my little nephew talking to me about wanting to attend UCLA-Harvard, which he thought was a single institution. The fact that he was even thinking that way—about going to college—is what’s important.”
When Laisha Mondesir’s mother came to the United States from Guyana on her own at the age of 19, she was just one year older than Laisha is now.

“I can’t imagine going through the things my parents did to come to this country and make a life for themselves at such a young age,” Laisha says. “I really admire them.”

Laisha and her two brothers have grown up in Inglewood, California, in a close-knit, supportive family. Their parents have always emphasized education and faith in God.

Influenced in part by her mother’s career as a nurse, Laisha wants to become a doctor.

Currently a senior at Los Angeles Center for Enriched Studies, she is vice president of her class, secretary of the Black Student Union, captain of the cheerleading team and a member of the national honor society. Yet, the thought of a college scholarship never really occurred to her.

“When I found out I was nominated for Posse I was shocked, Laisha says. “You do your best in school but you never really think anyone is watching.”

As she prepares to head off to the University of California, Berkeley this fall as a member of the very first Posse to enroll there, Laisha is excitedly anticipating an enriching experience and a quality education.

“I look forward to setting a high standard as the first Posse at Berkeley,” she says, “and as a part of the Posse network, learning from those that went before me and mentoring those that will follow.”
The Cruz brothers, seniors at Pelham Academy in the Bronx, have built a strong reputation among the faculty there for engaging everything with infectious enthusiasm. They rank at the top of their class and still remain humble, keenly aware of the incredible sacrifices that their grandparents have made to support their achievements.

When in grade school, Jonathan and Gilbert lost their father to a heart attack and were later evicted from their home. Their mother, a drug addict, was unable to care for them, and they were shifted from group home to group home while their two younger sisters went to live with their grandparents. All four were eventually adopted by their grandparents, but their mother died a few years later, jolting the family once again.

“My grandparents have been the most influential people in our lives,” says Gilbert. “Even though our parents were there for us in some ways, I feel that our grandparents gave us a moral foundation, which is so important.”

“Both my grandparents are retired, and they're supporting us while living off of social security,” Jonathan says. “Before we'd heard about Posse, we'd argue about which one of us would be able to afford to go to college.”

With the Posse Scholarship in hand, Jonathan and Gilbert have big plans. Jonathan wants to become an engineer, citing his love of math. Gilbert plans on majoring in political science and hopes to one day become a politician.

“The Posse Scholarship means so much to me,” Gilbert says. “We feel like celebrities sometimes.”
Veronica Rivera Savage was raised by a working-class, single mother on the Lower East Side of Manhattan, where her family settled after migrating to New York City from Puerto Rico in the late 1950s. A member of the very first Posse, she enrolled at Vanderbilt University 20 years ago, and was the first in her family to go to college.

“I grew up seeing people work really, really hard and get compensated very little,” she says. “I was actually going to be content with a high school diploma. My vision for what I wanted for my life was really small. The word ‘scholarship’ meant that this huge burden had been lifted.

“When people found out that I was going away to college, I think they felt a fear that I’d somehow forget about my roots. At the same time, there was an incredible amount of pride that one of us was getting a chance.”

After completing a degree in psychology and human and organizational development at Vanderbilt, Veronica went on to earn a master’s degree in social work at Fordham University. Today, along with her husband, she is raising a family of her own and is the school social worker at City-As-School High School, where she attended.

“This is where I belong,” Veronica says. “I’ve got a connection with these kids knowing that I’ve walked in their shoes. A big part of my job is getting kids to aim higher. When I look at the kids I work with, I imagine how far they can go because someone did that for me.

“Posse has changed my life and because of that, it’s changed my children’s. The whole Vanderbilt experience opened me up and gave me confidence that I got a really great education. That helps me to be a role model for my children.”
Juan Garcia grew up in Virginia, in predominantly Latino, underserved communities where, as he says, his parents felt most comfortable among their own. He graduated third in his high school class and is now a sophomore at Grinnell College in Iowa, double majoring in sociology and Russian.

Recently awarded a Mellon Mays Fellowship, Juan plans to go to law school and eventually pursue a career in immigration policy or international relations.

As the only American-born son of Salvadoran immigrants and the first to go to college, Juan admires and appreciates his parents’ hard work and many sacrifices to build a life for him and his two older brothers. Juan’s mother taught herself basic reading and writing skills, and his father, also minimally educated, is now a U.S. citizen. They have worked jobs in dry cleaning, construction and sanitation for more than 20 years.

“My parents give and sacrifice so much for me that I would be embarrassed if I didn’t reciprocate,” he says. “I have to give them good grades and not just one major, but two.”

Juan considers himself very fortunate to have his parents unconditional support. He recalls a time in sixth grade when he expected to sit out of the school orchestra because his parents could not afford a new instrument, but was instead presented with a violin his mom found at a pawn shop. Perhaps the most significant moment occurred last year when Juan came out to his parents with some trepidation, yet found they love and support him just the same.

Today, Juan still plays the violin, has started a queer bible study group on campus, and is very committed to helping other struggling immigrant families like his own.
Having grown up in some of Washington, D.C.'s worst neighborhoods, Kameisha Hodge, the oldest of 11 children, feels additional pressure to succeed. At only 19 years old, she has a very mature outlook on life and an inspiring ability to overcome obstacles.

During her senior year alone, Kameisha attended seven different high schools, moving around with her mother, brother and sister between different family members' homes and even a homeless shelter. When she finally settled at Friendship Academy, Kameisha still managed to graduate near the top of her class.

“Waking up every morning not knowing where I would sleep that night was very overwhelming,” she says. “But I don’t regret that experience. It helped build my character. I learned and endured a lot.”

One challenge she still faces is the fractured relationship with her father and subsequently his children, eight of her 10 siblings who she doesn’t see often but on whom she hopes to have an impact.

“From a young age, it’s been instilled in me that I’m the oldest,” Kameisha says. “I feel obligated to show my brothers and sisters that they don’t have to be a product of their environment—I’m not.”

Choosing to major in English was a natural decision for Kameisha who has always loved to write. Now in her second year at Lafayette College, she is a resident advisor, founder of the Precision Step Team and vice president of a student writing organization.

Currently, she is working on a dissertation that she plans to eventually publish—a largely nonfiction story of her experience at Lafayette and her first offering in her future career as a novelist.
The Posse Foundation is sincerely thankful for the profound generosity of its donors. The return on your investment is a country and workforce better prepared to meet the distinct challenges of our complex society. Together we are making a positive difference that will only gain in significance as the number of Posse Alumni—our greatest asset—continues to grow. Thank you again for your belief in the program. Your commitment to Posse will help thousands of students pursue the opportunity of a lifetime.

Making the Posse Promise Permanent

In 2003, The Sallie Mae Fund offered The Posse Foundation a matching dollar-for-dollar endowment challenge of $5 million. Posse met this challenge in May of 2006, and a $10 million endowment was established.

Only two months later, The Posse Foundation received a pledge of $10 million from Tim and Sharon Ubben, doubling the size of the endowment to $20 million. The Ubben’s remarkable gift guaranteed the future of The Posse Foundation.

Endowment funds provide the necessary resources to help ensure Posse’s longevity and continued growth. With the guidance of the Posse Board of Directors and the dedication and commitment of its donors, Posse continues to grow its endowment and make permanent its promise of educational opportunity for thousands of young people.
The Posse Foundation welcomed 600 guests at Pier Sixty at Chelsea Piers in New York City to celebrate its 19th anniversary on May 21. Leaders from the philanthropic, corporate, academic, and entertainment communities gathered to honor individuals and organizations that have made extraordinary contributions in the field of education. These honorees—recipients of the Posse Star Award—were Michael Ainslie, Posse chair emeritus and former president, CEO and director of Sotheby’s Holdings; Carlos Carela, Vanderbilt Posse 6 (New York) Alumnus and founder and owner of Cava Wine Bar & Gallery; PricewaterhouseCoopers, represented by CEO Samuel DiPiazza; and John D. Wiley, then chancellor of University of Wisconsin-Madison. Emceed by 60 Minutes Correspondent Lesley Stahl, the 2008 Posse Gala broke its previous record, raising $1.4 million.

The accompanying notes on page 45 are an integral part of these financial statements.
Net Assets

Posse maintains its net assets under the following three classes:

Unrestricted: represents resources available for support of Posse’s operations over which the Board of Directors (the “Board”) has discretionary control.

Temporarily restricted: net assets resulting from contributions and other inflows of assets subject to donor-imposed stipulations that either expire by the passage of time or can be fulfilled and removed by actions of Posse pursuant to those stipulations. When such stipulations end or are fulfilled, such temporarily restricted net assets are reported in the statement of activities as net assets released from restrictions.

Permanently restricted: net assets subject to donor-imposed stipulations that principal be maintained permanently by Posse, but the earnings of which are available and accounted for in unrestricted operations.

Unrestricted Net Assets

Posse’s operations resulted in a reduction of unrestricted net assets of approximately $7,073,000 for the year ended December 31, 2008, principally due to losses in its investment activity resulting from market fluctuations. As a result, unrestricted net assets were reduced to a deficit of approximately ($1,072,000) as of December 31, 2008, as compared to a balance of approximately $6,001,000 as of December 31, 2007. Management believes that these losses are temporary. In addition, Posse is continuing to identify ways to reduce costs and increase unrestricted contributions.
